PENNSYLVANIA DAY.

State College Has Biggest Gathering in Its History on This Occasion—Governor Tener Present, But Not Governor-Elect Brumbaugh.

More than 10,000 Pennsylvanians went to State College Friday to inspect their state institution, and to participate in the annual observance of Pennsylvania Day. They thronged and crowded into the twenty odd circus tents that housed the exhibits of the agricultural fair, staged by the students of the agricultural school.

Outside of the gathering of the old members and members-elect to the general assembly and the state senate, Governor Tener and part of his cabinet made up the list of dignitaries who joined with the college trustees in celebrating the occasion. Nearly 100 representatives and senators met at the State College in their first political gathering.

Coming only a few days after election, Penn day afforded the first opportunity for legislators to get acquainted and to lay their plans for the coming session.

At the morning exercises in the Schwab auditorium, Dr. Sparks, president, said this was the most important Pennsylvania Day State College had ever had, being the largest in point of attendance and the most representative, as there were so many members of the Legislature in attendance. Dr. Sparks said: "The property which comprises the buildings, equipment and grounds of your college is valued at more than $2,000,000, and today we account to the taxpayer of this commonwealth for our stewardship of it."

Dr. Sparks read letters of regret from Governor-elect Brumbaugh, Senator Boies Penrose and many others.

Warden John Francies, of the new State Penitentiary, like all the other speakers, was greeted with a college yell. He said it sounded like his college at breakfast.

In the football game with the Michigan Agricultural College, "State" lost a hard fought game by the score of 6 to 3.

The Knocker's Prayer.

Lord please don't let this town grow. I've been here for thirty years, and during that time I've fought every public improvement. I've knocked everything and everybody, no firm or individual has established a business here without my doing all I could to put them out of business. I've lied about them, and would have stolen from them if I had the courage. I have done all I could to keep the town from growing and never have spoken a good word for it. I've knocked hard and often. I've put ashes on the children's slide and I've made the marshal stop the boys playing ball on my vacant lot. Whenever I saw anyone prospering or enjoying themselves I've started a reform to kill the business or spoil the fun. I don't want the young folks to stay in this town and I will do all I can by law, rule and ordinance to drive them away. It pains me, O Lord, to see that in spite of my knocking it is beginning to grow. Some day I fear I will be called upon to put down sidewalks in front of my property and who knows but what I may have to help keep up the streets that run by my premises? This, Lord, would be more than I could bear. It would cost me money, though all I have was made right here in this town. Then, too, more people might come if the town begins to grow, which would cause me to lose some of my pull. I ask therefore, to keep this town at a standstill, that I may continue to be the chief. Amen.

LESSONS FOR FARMERS' WIVES.

Pennsylvania State College Will Give Wives Equal Chances With Husbands to Improve Methods of Doing Daily Tasks.

Practical illustrations in reducing the cost of living are to be given farmers' wives at the Pennsylvania State College in connection with the Winter Course in Agriculture. For several years farmers from all over the State have come here to learn the newest wrinkles in scientific agriculture, and this year their wives are offered equal chances to improve their methods of doing daily tasks.

Miss Pearl MacDonald, who came from Wisconsin to help the wives of Pennsylvania farmers solve the increasingly difficult problems of household administration, will conduct the new work. She will tell the women studying Home Economics about the compositions of various foods, the purposes they serve in the body, food values, the principles of cooking, proper food combinations and food substitutes. Miss MacDonald said since every homekeeper must consider the food problem three times each day, every day in the year, because of the steady advance in food prices, a reliable knowledge of food materials is becoming indispensable for the woman in the home who desires to purchase those materials wisely and to nourish her household properly.

A course will also be given in Home Nursing and Emergencies. It will include a discussion of the nature of diseases and their causes, and of simple practical methods to be followed in the home care of the sick.

Two Nights Next Week.

Two evenings to be remembered next week are Thursday, when Progress Grange will give their customary Thanksgiving supper, to which the public is invited, and the following evening when Dr. James Hedley will give one of his famous lectures. He appears as the second number on the Centre Hall Lecture Course.

I've stopped the paper, yes I have,
I didn't like to do it;
But the editor he got too smart,
And I allow he'll rue it.
I am a man who pays his debts,
And will not be insulted,
So when the editor gets smart
I want to be consulted.

I took the paper 'leven years
And helped him all I could sir,
But when it come to dunning me
I didn't think he would, sir.
But that he did, and you can bet
It made me hot as thunder;
I says, "I'll stop that sheet, I will,
If the doggone thing goes under."

I hunted up the editor
And fer his cunnin' caper
I paid him 'LEVEN years and quit!
Yes, sir, I stopped the paper.

DR. JAMES HEDLEY, LECTURER.

Second Attraction on Centre Hall Lecture Course to Appear Friday, November 27.

Friday following Thanksgiving the second number on the Centre Hall Lecture Course will appear in Grange Hall. It will be a lecture by Dr. James Hedley, an orator who has few equals on the lyceum platform in America. The theme of Dr. Hedley's lecture will be "What is a Man Worth?", possibly the strongest of his seven famous lectures; at least it is one that Dr. Hedley delights to give to his audiences and it has always been well received. While it is a lecture that gives one something to think about, it is not dry, and there will be plenty of opportunity to enjoy a good laugh on account of the humor that his talk contains.

What others who have heard him think of his lecture speaks better of the man and his subject than it is possible to pen. The following is from the St. Joseph, Missouri, Gazette, where Dr. Hedley gave this famous lecture:

The Y. M. C. A. Lyceum Course was opened by Dr. James Hedley, the distinguished lecturer. Dr. Hedley is a man of national reputation, having delivered some of his famous lectures over seven hundred times. His subject last night was "What Is a Man Worth?" and the speaker held his audience for nearly two hours with magnetic power. Many of his best points were humorously illustrated and often brought storms of applause from the audience, and yet it could not be said the sole object of the speaker was to make people laugh. He impressed the audience with the fact that he had something to say and knew how to say it.

LOCALS

Prof. and Mrs. H. A. Dodson became the proud parents of a baby daughter, perfect in every way, Saturday night. The girlie came eight pounds big. Both the mother and child are doing splendidly.

Isaac Miller of Bellefonte, a member of a hunting party encamped in the Alleghenies, fell from a camp box and dislocated his left shoulder. Owing to his advanced age, seventy-four years, he was prevailed upon to return home, but he was so eager to get a deer that he refused and hunted with his arm strapped to his side. He returned to Bellefonte Saturday night and the arm was reset.

Hugh Runkle, living at Zion, in taking several horses across the Seven Mountains to the Yoder sale at Belleville, last week, came across a big bear in the Lewistown Narrows. Bruin was in the brush close to the road and refused to scare at either Runkle's presence or at the fire from his .22 calibre revolver which he directed at Mr. Bear more with the thought of chasing him than making him his meat.

The first good rain in many weeks fell Sunday and continued throughout the day, the goverment rain gauge showing a precipitation in the evening of 1.05 inches. It was a steady rain and was readily taken up by the parched ground. Farmers were thankful for it, for with winter close at hand and springs and cisterns dry the water problem would have been a hard one for the farmer. A drop in temperature and high wind followed the rainfall.

Hoof and mouth disease among cattle is said to have spread with alarming rapidity throughout Snyder county, and reports from veterinarians in that county estimate that the infection affects over 100 cases. Twenty-six cases of aphthus fever were diagnosed Friday on the John Stauffer farm adjoining Selinsgrove. The infection has been traced to a car load of cattle shipped to Selinsgrove from Lancaster county and distributed in fifteen townships.

LOCALS

Harry Brown of Spring Mills is working in the local depot while station agent W. F. Bradford is hunting for deer.

Paul Davis and a fellow companion of Reedsville hiked across the Seven Mountains Thursday and made a short visit to the public schools. The young men were on their way to State College to take in the exercises incident to Pennsylvania Day.

Rev. Kurtz of Somerset county filled three appointments on the Lutheran charge, Sunday, preaching at Georges Valley in the morning, Union in the afternoon, and Centre Hall in the evening. It was Rev. Kurtz's second appearance here and his sermons were well received on both occasions.

Joseph K. Bitner, near Farmers Mills, dug a well near his home last week, striking water with little or no difficulty at a depth of eight or ten feet. Mr. Bitner recently modernized his home by installing bath room fixtures and the water from his new well will run by gravity to the house and barn.

Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Bausman and daughter, Miss Minnie, of Millersville spent the greater part of a week at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. F. Bitner, returning Monday. Dr. Bausman is a trustee of the Millersville State Normal School and he and Dr. Bitner became fast friends during the latter's twenty-three years as instructor in that institution. A trip to the Bear Meadows for a day in quest of big game was highly enjoyed by the gentleman.

Harry B. Frankenberger is taking good care of a wild turkey that came to his place in a crippled condition on the first day of the hunting season. Some hunter, who regards the law's protection of wild turkeys as a joke, attempted to get his game but succeeded only in breaking one of the bird's legs. The hen did a wise thing in seeking refuge with Mr. Frankenberger and he is doing all in his power to prepare the bird for its wild habitat.

The heavy firing upon deer in the Seven Mountains since the opening of the season has driven many of the deer into the valley. On Monday, Harry E. Fye, while riding in the train observed a big doe running in an enclosed field on Henry Gingerich's farm near Linden Hall. On the same day one eligible for a .30-30 ball was seen by Harry Moyer near town and he tracked the buck for a distance which proved that he had taken to Nittany Mountain where he may yet become the prize of some local hunter.

The New Wet and Dry Line-Up.

As a result of the November elections there are now fourteen states in the dry column. They are Arizona, Colorada, Georgia, Kansas, Maine, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Tennessee, Virginia, Washington and West Virginia.

There remain fifteen states in which half the population live in so-called no-license territory. They are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Idaho, Iowa, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas and Vermont.

There remain eleven states in which 25 per cent. of the population lives in no-license territory. They are California, Deleware, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming. At different times in the past twenty-three states have adopted the policy of prohibition. All but nine for one reason or another, abandoned it for local option or control by license.

California and Ohio, out of the six states in which statewide prohibition amendments were voted on this fall, elected to remain in the wet column. In Ohio the new amendment to the constitution practically places the state in the wet column forever, as it provides that no new liquor legislation shall be introduced into the legislature. The present laws, however, are very strict and are carried out to the letter. The new amendment does not prohibit the holding of wet and dry elections in communities, under the laws that are at present in force.

The states that have voted dry during the year 1914 are Arizona, Colorado, Oregon, Washington and Virginia.

Messrs. A. J. Crotzer and Christ Yoder of Belleville on their return home from Pennsylvania Day exercises at State College, stopped in Centre Hall long enough for the former to advance his subscription one year on the Reporter. Mr. Crotzer is a former resident of Potter township.

William H. Swartz was husking corn in a field adjoining the road leading from Aaronsburg to the Coburn turnpike recently and did not take time to haul the ears into the crib. During the night a thief sorted out the piles and hauled away between fifteen and twenty bushels of the nicest corn.

The entire valley was in the grip of a wind storm, Friday. Tents at State College, in which were exhibits of the agricultural school, were blown down, telephone poles were snapped off at the other end of the valley, and while no material damage was done about Centre Hall, farmers were given extra work through the wind's pranks in corn fields where almost whole fields of fodder were torn down. Straw stacks also were prey for the storm and in a number of places were badly treated.

Misses Mary and Zella Sharer, two Port Matilda maids, on Tuesday of last week saw a deer in a field where some men were husking corn for their father, says the Philipsburg Journal. They told the men they had seen the deer, but they treated it as a joke. The girls, however, procured a rifle in the home and started in quest of the deer. Soon it was sighted, and Miss Mary fired at the animal and brought it to the ground. It proved to be a four prong buck, and weighed 160 pounds. It was dragged to the house by the girls.

The Reedsville correspondent to the Lewistown Sentinel, last week, said: While Charles Meyer, rural mail carrier from this place, was passing along the Honey Creek road near James McFarland's, one day last week, his attention was drawn by a splashing in the water at the edge of the creek. Upon investigation he found it to be a large mink battling with an exceedingly large eel. Mr. Meyer jumped from his buggy and seizing a stone fired at the combatants and either by skill or good luck struck the mink on the head the first trial, which laid it low, but the eel escaped. Mr. Meyer brought the mink home with him and it was viewed by many of the citizens who pronounced it to be the largest mink seen in these parts for a number of years.

GERMANS PUSH BACK BRITISH LINE BUT FAIL IN ASSAULT UPON YPRES; RUSSIANS ADVANCING ON CRACOW

RIVAL ARMIES DEADLOCKED IN BATTLE OF FLANDERS

Famous Prussian Guard Mowed Down in Fierce Assault on the British Forces

GERMANS FIGHT TO VICTORY OVER BODIES OF SUBMERGED COMRADES

"There is no daily gauge of success or failure. Many of the men taken prisoners in the four weeks of day and night fighting oscillating this way and that over three or four miles of country in the northern theatre can scarcely believe victory or defeat is possible."
—From a war correspondent on the Belgian battle front.

London.—In the terrific attack by Prussian Guards on the British forces defending Ypres the Kaiser's troops broke the opposing line at three points, although they were not able to penetrate to the town.

This fact became known with the issuance of the following communication by the Official Press Bureau:

"A very severe attack against the portion of the line held by the First Army Corps before Ypres was delivered by a Prussian Guard corps. The enemy made an especial effort on this occasion to break the line, which they hoped had been weakened already by attacks of infantry of the line. The facts, briefly, are as follows:

"Our troops were subjected to the heaviest bombardment that we have yet experienced, from dawn for three hours. This was at once followed up by an assault in force, carried out by the First and Fourth Brigades of the Prussian Guard Corps. It is understood that these picked troops had been brought up specially to act against us, in order to force their way through at points where previous efforts, made by infantry of the line, had failed.

"The attack was pressed with the greatest bravery and determination. Owing to the gallantry of our troops and their splendid resistance against great odds, the attempt to penetrate to Ypres was repulsed, but the weight of the enemy's advance enabled them to break through our lines at three points. They were, however, held back and prevented from gaining further ground.

"An immense loss had been inflicted on the Germans, 700 of their dead having been found on the ground behind our front trenches alone. The casualties suffered by them in advancing up to our line under direct and enfiladed fire must have been enormous. Our casualties also were heavy.

"The action of our troops on this as well as on previous occasions can never be praised too highly."

RUSSIAN VICTORY IN POLAND.

Petrograd.—The Army Messenger announced that the Russian army had won another big victory over the Germans near Kalicz, in western Poland. The Germans were forced to retreat, it says, abandoning thousands of dead on the battlefield, and the Russians captured twelve howitzers

These guns are believed to be part of the heavy artillery with which the Germans had planned to batter the fortifications of Warsaw and Ivangored. Their loss is likely to prove a severe handicap to the Kaiser's army.

Kalicz is only a few miles east of the border of Posen and forms part of the line of defense to which the Germans retired after their unsuccessful drive toward the Vistula. It is on the Prosna River.

In Galicia, it is officially reported, a retreating Austrian army, estimated at from 150,000 to 200,000 men, has been caught between two Russian armies.

FOURTH WEEK OF BATTLE.

Paris.—The end of the fourth week of the terrific Battle of Flanders saw the Germans once more turn the famous and formidable Prussian guard on the British in the hope of winning their way through to the coast.

The last French Government report contained an admission that a force of Germans captured with the greatest bravery a short line on the left bank of the Yser.

After the series of desperate rushes by the Kaiser's troops along the line between the coast and Ypres which resulted in their capture of Dixmude, the Allies turned the tables again by driving all the invaders who had beaten their way across the Yser back to the opposite bank, except at one point. This detachment, according to official report, occupied a front of not more than a thousand feet.

The bitter combat is being marked by alternative and unimportant advances and retreats, and in a general way the battle front has shown no appreciable variation.

The centre of the attacks has been Ypres, the defence of which will certainly be reckoned in history as one of the most striking episodes in the annals of the British army.

For more than three weeks that position, which projects like a bastion in the enemy's lines, has been held under a rain of shells which has hardly ceased day or night. During this time the enemy has poured successive waves of infantry against the British, only to see them broken to pieces.

According to German officers who have fallen into the hands of the Allies about 500,000 Germans were fighting against the Allies at the beginning of the great battle on the Yser. The German casualties the officers themselves put at 90,000, from which it can be assumed that actually their losses run well into six figures.

In one case a regiment of Infanterie de Marine, 1,800 strong, had only eighty men left, while the great movement on the Ypres made the losses among the officers extraordinarily heavy, including five generals killed.

The Germans continue to destroy bridges and railways in Belgium, but their object remains a secret. It is thought, however, that they are making preparations to winter in that country and are taking every step to prevent their plans becoming known to the Allies.

The siege of Przemysl, which was suspended during the period of the Austro-German offensive, has been resumed.

Allies Lose 1800 Men

Germans Announce Captures In the Yser Fighting.

London. — The following official statement issued by the army headquarters in Berlin was received here by wireless:

On the branch of the Yser Canal at Nieuport our marines have inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and we have taken 700 prisoners. During our attacks on Ypres, which have progressed favorably, another 1,100 prisoners have been taken.

Fierce French attacks to the west and east of Soissons have been repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

On the East Prussian frontier, at Eydtkuhmen, and also further south to the east of the outlet of the Mazurian lakes, fresh battles have developed, but no decision has yet been reached.

German Aviators Fly Over British Ports, Says Berlin

Wireless Tells of Trips to Sheerness and Harwich Within 40 Miles of London.

Berlin.—According to news given out to the press in official quarters, German aviators have flown over the English seaports of Sheerness and Harwich.

Sheerness is a fortified seaport in Kent, at the mouth of the Thames. It is about forty miles from London. Harwich is in Essex, and about seventy miles northeast of London.

FIGHT IN FLOOD.

Troops Around Ypres Are Leading Amphibious Lives.

Rotterdam. — Fighting continues night and day at Ypres in Belgium. A decisive victory in this region will go to the side which brings up the most re-enforcements.

Owing to the constant heavy rains which have flooded the country the men are leading an amphibious life. Their chief concern is to keep their cartridges dry. Soldiers are in many cases fighting in their bare feet, as their boots have been reduced to pulp.

Both sides have made numerous captures of guns which cannot be moved.

The Kaiser remains in the vicinity visiting different points in a gray automobile.

Sydney Drove Emden Ashore in 80 Minutes

Australian Cruiser Kept Out of Range and Shot Antagonist to Pieces—Was Hit by Only Two Shells

London.—The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Keeling, in the Cocos Islands, Frederick Poltock, who was an eye-witness of the destruction of the German cruiser Emden by the Australian cruiser Sydney, cables a detailed account of the affair.

The islands are inhabited only by Malays, except for the staff of the Eastern Telegraph Company's cable and wireless station on Direction Island, one of the group, and the descendants of June Clunies Ross, a Scottish naval officer who settled in the islands and founded a line of "uncrowned kings" some ninety years ago.

Little news of the war reached the islands except official bulletins, which were relayed through the cable station. Then came a rumor that the cable company was sending rifles and orders that the beach should be patrolled to guard against Germans who might come and try to cut the cable and destroy the wireless station. Singapore later informed the islands that a German cruiser was on the way toward them, but except for one of the cable operators seeing what he thought were searchlights at sea one night toward the end of August, nothing came of this report.

The Emden, with four funnels—the fourth obviously merely a painted canvas dummy arrived at full speed at the entrance of the lagoon at 6 o'clock in the morning. She flew no flag, and this fact together with the dummy funnel, aroused the suspicions of the cable staff.

Cable Instruments Wrecked.

The cruiser immediately lowered an armored launch and two boats, and landed three officers and forty men, fully armed and equipped with four Maxim guns. The Germans rushed to the cable station, expelled the operators, smashed the instruments, confiscated the weapons of the staff and put armed guards in all the buildings.

In spite of the excitement outside, work went on as usual in the cable office until the Germans rushed in, and a general call for help was sent out just before the wireless station was blown up.

The Germans were most civil, but put the staff under armed guards, while the instruments were destroyed. There was no brutality or pillaging. Meanwhile the crew of the launch grappled for the cables, but failed to cut them. The electrical stores then were blown up.

The Emden's siren blew at 9 o'clock and the Germans on shore hurried to the boats, but the Emden started immediately, leaving the boats behind. The appearance of a warship to the eastward coming at full speed in pursuit explained the departure. The ship turned out to be the Sydney.

The Emden fired the first shot at a range of about 3,700 yards while steaming north at her highest speed. The Emden's firing at first seemed excellent and the Sydney's rather erratic. It was learned afterward that the latter was due to the fact that the Sydney's rangefinder had been put out of action by one of the two shots the Emden got home.

Emden Set on Fire.

The Sydney's gunners soon overcame the difficulties caused by the smashing of the rangefinder and before long two of the Emden's funnels had been shot away. Her mast was lost at the beginning of the fight. The cruisers disappeared over the horizon, both firing their big guns. The Emden was afire aft.

The landing party, which had started out for the Emden, returned to shore and lined up on the shore of the lagoon, evidently ready to fight if the Sydney sent men ashore, but, both cruisers having disappeared, the Germans at 6 o'clock in the evening embarked on the old schooner Ayesha, belonging to Mr. Ross, the present "uncrowned king" of the island, took clothes and stores and sailed for an unknown destination.

The Sydney returned the next morning and anchored at 8:45 o'clock. From accounts given by the crew it seems that the Sydney, being the speedier, kept out of range of the Emden's guns, bombarding her with heavier artillery. The engagement lasted eighty minutes. The Emden was beached north of Keeling Island a complete wreck.

The Emden fired two effective shells. One smashed the main range finder of the Sydney and killed one man, without exploding. The other killed three and wounded fourteen. Both cruisers attempted to use torpedoes, but failed. The Sydney steamed at the rate of twenty knots during the fight; the Emden at the rate of twenty-four knots.

ney, telegraphs the correspondent at Sydney, N. S. W., of the Evening News. They are arranging to show their recognition of his gallantry and courtesy.

All the morning papers of Berlin unite in publishing articles in praise of the commerce destroying career of the Emden, and they declare that her final destruction always had been counted on.

British Loss Amounts to 57,000 Men Since European War Began

Premier Announces Staggering Figures and Is Expected to Call for Another 1,000,000 Recruits.

London.—England was staggered by an announcement from Premier Asquith stating that the British casualties in the war to date are 57,000 killed, wounded and missing.

With this toll paid in the fighting so far, more men are to be rushed to the front. A supplementary estimate from the War Office declared that with 1,000,000 more men the total British strength of all ranks would be 2,186,400.

Recruiting has increased to a great extent during the week. It is expected that Premier Asquith will formally seek the sanction of Parliament for the raising of these 1,000,000 additional troops.

The statement of the Premier placing the casualties at approximately 57,000 was written in reply to inquiries from members of the House of Commons.

Premier Asquith will ask the House of Commons to vote a fresh credit for war purposes. It is understood that the Premier will ask that the new loan be for £225,000,000 ($1,125,000,000) and at the same time will request authority to enlist 1,000,000 additional troops.

GERMANS FOUGHT WAY TO VICTORY OVER SUBMERGED BODIES OF COMRADES.

Paris.—Accounts of the German entry into Dixmude, received through the German lines, say the fighting was the most terrible yet experienced. A corps commander ordered his troops to take the town and warned them not to return alive if they failed.

The earlier onslaughts are said to have resulted in the slaughter of 80 per cent. of the attackers, who were unable to advance speedily across the flooded fields. Their bodies piling up in the water formed a footing for the infantry following, who thus were enabled to struggle for victory over the submerged bodies of their comrades.

EPITOME OF WAR NEWS

The Allies have lost heavily in the fighting in Belgium, where the German attacks around Ypres progressed favorably, according to an official statement in Berlin.

An unofficial dispatch states that the Allies have retaken Dixmude.

German Army Headquarters reports that the marines at Nieuport have inflicted heavy losses on the Allies, and have captured 700 prisoners.

Paris reports four German aviators trapped and slain in a battle with two British and two French airmen near Ypres.

The news from South Africa shows that General Botha has inflicted a heavy defeat upon General De Wet, whose force narrowly escaped annihilation. The Union troops captured 250 rebels and two complete laagers, including automobiles and one hundred carts and wagons.

Berlin reported that the Allies were repulsed at Lombaertzyde, less than two miles from the North Sea, and were driven across the Yser.

The Russians continue to press on in East Prussia, with the object of straightening out their line for an advance on Berlin. Berlin announced a victory over a Cossack force.

A force of 6,000 Austrians, who crossed the Danube into Servia, was cut to pieces, 2,000 being taken prisoners.

The Turkish Caucasian army is attacking the second line of the Russian position, Constantinople said.

Dixmude, north of Ypres, was captured by the Germans after "the fiercest fighting of the war."

The French War Office admits the loss of Dixmude to the Germans, but states that the foe's attempt to debouch from that place along the left bank of the Yser failed.

Another British warship, the eighth, the gunboat Niger, of 810 tons, was sunk by a German submarine in the English Channel, near Dover. There was no loss of life.

The Germans lost ground in Belgium, according to the French War Office, which announces that the portion of the left bank of the Yser Canal which the Germans held has been completely evacuated.

Slight gains by the Germans in the recent fighting in Belgium and the capture of several hundred French and British Troops and two machine guns are reported from Berlin.

Petrograd reports that the battle on the left bank of the Vistula river, in Poland, is developing from Plack to the River Warthe. The report states that the Russians are making progress in East Prussia, that the march on Cracow, in Galicia, continues, and that farther west in Galicia the Austrians are preparing a defense on the San river, in the Dounaietz region.

Vienna admits that the Austrian troops in Servia have encountered stout resistance at Baljevo, which they have not succeeded in overcoming, but says that along the River Save the Austrians are making progress.

Repulse of Austrian attacks in Montenegro, Herzegovina and Bosnia are reported from Cettinje.

Turkish troops, according to a dispatch from Constantinople, have occupied Kotur, in the Persian province of Azerbaizan, after defeating a force of Russians. The same dispatch reports that British troops have landed near Fao, on the Persian Gulf, under fire, losing 60 men while landing.

Constantinople reports, via Berlin, that the Ameer of Afghanistan has declared his determination to declare war on Russia and Great Britain, and that the Khedive of Egypt has announced his loyalty to the Sultan and his intention to accompany the Turkish army which is marching on Egypt.

Three British warships have been sighted off Colon and are expected to pass through the Panama Canal to the Pacific Ocean to join the Japanese warships which are reported searching for the German cruisers which recently sunk the British cruisers Good Hope and Monmouth off the coast of Chile.

BIG BRITISH WARSHIP SUNK.

Audacious, Superdreadnaught, Sent To Bottom October 27.

New York.—Rumors of disaster to the British superdreadnaught Audacious, which have persisted ever since the White Star Liner Olpmpic, diverted from her course, arrived at Lough Swilly on October 29, are confirmed in mail advices received from a point in Ireland.

After a career of less than two years, the Audacious, of the King George V class—third in tonnage and armament of his Majesty's warships—lies at the bottom of the ocean off the north coast of Ireland. She was hit by a torpedo or disabled by a mine just before 9 o'clock on the morning of October 27. With the possible exception of one or two men, the whole crew of 800 officers and men was rescued by small boats from the Olympic.

The rescue was made in a rough sea through brilliant and daring seamanship on the part of the White Star crew.

LORD ROBERTS DIES IN FRANCE.

Field Marshal Was Visiting the Troops From India.

London.—Field Marshal Earl Roberts died in France from pneumonia.

A telegram from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary forces on the Continent, apprised Earl Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, of the death of England's great soldier. The telegram read:

"I deeply regret to tell you that Lord Roberts died at 8 o'clock this (Saturday) evening."

Field Marshal Roberts, who was colonel-in-chief of the Indian troops, had gone to France to give them his greetings. Soon after his arrival he became seriously ill.

He suffered from a severe chill on Thursday and pneumonia rapidly developed. His great age, 82 years, militated against his recovery, the crisis in the disease coming quickly.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

Together he and Mark dragged Piotr to the cab and forced him within. Piotr, dazed by Mark's appearance, resisted but feebly.

Before the grim majesty of approaching death even Piotr's madness was abashed. The supreme consciousness received back the atom that, when imprisoned in flesh, had been Roman. It was Kazia who saw.

"He is dead."

The Matka uttered a low moan, then became silent again, resumed her rigid gazing at the not less still body. Piotr's hand passed over his eyes in a bewildered gesture. The woman who kept the door made the sign of the cross and went quietly out.

Kazia bent over to kiss Roman's forehead. Then Piotr came out of his daze. He caught her roughly and drew her back.

"No!"

"Piotr!"

"You're not fit to touch him."

She turned and went slowly into the kitchen. Piotr followed.

He confronted her and Mark. "You can go now, both of you."

"Oh, Piotr, not now!" Kazia began pleadingly. "The Matka needs me and—"

"We need nothing from you. We weren't good enough for you once. You left us to be a fine lady. Now we don't want you."

"But I came back and you wouldn't let me stay."

"Yes, when you found that Jim Whiting couldn't give you what you wanted. You thought you could use us then—as he did." He nodded toward Mark. "How," his teeth bared in an ugly accusing leer, "how did the Hunky girl get to be such a fine lady?"

"Be still!" Mark stepped close to him, sternly. "Isn't there any decency in that cracked mind of yours? Remember she came to them," he pointed toward the little bedroom, "when they needed some one. You were out filling the streets with your blackguardly rant. And whose money do you think had to keep them alive because you wouldn't do a man's work?"

"A man's work!" Piotr laughed, a horrible startling cackle. "To a cracked brain that isn't to betray and gouge and drive—" He broke off. "Do you mean it was her money?"

"Who else would have cared?"

Piotr went back into the death room, clutched his mother by the shoulder and shook her cruelly. "Tell me," he cried in her tongue, "have you taken money from her—that woman—when I told you what she was?"

The Matka shrank back from his vehemence. "I had to—to buy things to keep him alive."

Piotr, releasing her, stared, his mouth working queerly. "Even you're against me."

He went again slowly into the kitchen, taking up his hat from the

"What Have You Found, Roman? Is It Simple, There?"

table. He did not stop until he reached the door. There he turned, facing Kazia.

"You can have her now. I'm going."

"He's crazy," Mark muttered. "Don't mind him."

With an effort she recalled herself to the situation. "You had better go now. I must take care of the Matka. Will you please telephone to the hospital that I shan't be back tonight?"

"But I can't leave you alone here, while Piotr's at large. I'm going out to arrange for tomorrow. Then I'll come back here."

"It may be best," she agreed.

Two hours later he returned and rapped lightly. Receiving no answer, he tried the door. It opened and he entered quietly.

Hanka lay on a narrow cot, in the sleep of exhaustion. In a chair by the table, head pillowed on one arm, Kazia, too, slept. She stirred uneasily as he entered, then became still. He tiptoed to another chair and began his lonely watch.

The night seemed endless. To sit motionless, looking at the relaxed forlorn figure she made, became impossible. He rose and crept silently into the room where Roman lay. A single candle was burning low in its socket. By its faint flickering glow the waxen face and folded hands seemed not dead, but only at peace. Mark looked long at him, as though Roman held the answer to his questions. Once he leaned over, whispering.

"What have you found, Roman? Is it simple there? Is there a new birth in which mistakes can be paid for? . . . I want to pay."

CHAPTER XXV.

Payment.

It was two days after the funeral. Mark had seen Kazia but for a few minutes, merely long enough to learn her new plans, and then Hanka had been present. Kazia proposed to take care of her, and that they might not have to be apart, to give up her fine position at the hospital; she thought she could obtain a new one that would take up only her days. She had, of course, to find a new apartment.

All day Hanka had been alone in the dismantled flat, thinking not of him who had gone but of the woman who had assumed her protection. Often her head shook in troubled gesture. Hanka had not lost the habit of seeing and understanding many things from her shadowy corner. Not out of grief for the dead, she knew, had the look that haunted her come into Kazia's eyes.

The dinner was over, the dishes washed and put away; this being part of Hanka's share in the new division of labor. She went into the little bedroom whither Kazia had gone to dress. But at the door she stopped, unnoticed, looking at the figure that lay motionless and face downward on the bed. She started to steal away, then turned again and went timidly to the bedside. She laid a gentle hand on Kazia's hair.

"Little Kazia," she murmured, half frightened at her boldness, "what is troubling you?"

"Nothing, Matka," came the muffled answer.

"Is it because of me? I don't want to be a burden. I can go."

"No, no! You musn't leave me. I'm just tired."

"Heart tired. Is it because of him—your lover?"

"I have no lover."

Kazia rose wearily, and going to the mirror, began to take down her hair. The thick soft tresses fell tumbling around her. Hanka, in troubled wonder, watched the round arm that wielded the comb, the smooth firm shoulders. At Kazia's age Hanka had already begun to wither into an uncomeliness that men passed by undesiring. She went over to the dressing woman and touched timidly the firm, still youthful flesh.

"You are like your mother."

"What was she like?"

"She was like you." Kazia did not smile. "Men saw her and wanted her."

The comb became still. "Did she—did she love my father?"

"Such a love I have never seen."

It had been dark almost an hour when the bell rang. Hanka heard Kazia going to the door and a startled exclamation answered by a mellifluous voice Hanka did not know. The visitor was admitted and taken into the sitting room. To the kitchen came the murmur of Kazia's voice and his, chiefly his.

He had been there but a few minutes when his voice changed. It became eager, with an undertone that perturbed Hanka strangely. Once Kazia uttered a low hurt cry. Hanka rose and crept along the little hall She crouched in the darkness near the sitting room door, listening intently and wishing she had not been so stupid about English.

"Am I an ogre?" the mellifluous voice was saying.

"I do not love you."

"It is not a question of love. I am not old, but I have lived long enough to prick that illusion. We scientists know what love is."

"I don't care for you in any way," Kazia answered coldly. "Mr. Quinby, you oughtn't to be here. A man in your position—"

"My dear lady, let me remind you that the interest of a man in my position is not to be rejected lightly. With a word I gave you the best position your profession offers a woman. With a word I can take it away. I can relieve you of the necessity of working at all. I can make it impossible for you to find work in this city."

"Threats—"

"My dear lady!" the stranger's voice protested. "I would not do that. I would harm no one. I am a tender-hearted man. I, too, suffer, if by chance others suffer through me." The voice, vibrant with emotion, would have wrung tears of sympathy from a stone. But Hanka, as we have seen, could not weep. "I am only trying to show that those who enlist my interest do not lose by it."

"So you think I am for sale?"

"Forgive me, my dear," said Quinby, "but that is gross. Say rather that, since you have struck a responsive chord in my breast, it will be my pleasure to be guardian of your welfare, to lift you out of the sordid struggle for existence. And have I not proved that? You lay in the hollow of my hand. With a breath I could have destroyed your reputation. But I kept silence, I advanced your interests, I held you tenderly in my heart. Woman, you have bewitched me. I want you."

Hanka understood at least his last words and she understood his tone. She crept closer and through the crack of the sitting room door saw Kazia elude Quinby's outstretched arms.

At the same moment she heard a halting step on the stairway. She opened the outer door and went out to meet Mark Truitt, whispering excitedly to him in Polish. When he, astonished by her appearance and emotion, would have spoken, she clapped a hand over his mouth, and clutching him by a sleeve, drew him into the hall. She pointed through the crack.

Again Quinby reached toward Kazia and again she recoiled.

"Don't—don't touch me."

"Why do you rebuff me? You're not an ignorant child. You must have known what my interest in the hospital and in you this year has meant. You wouldn't have taken my help unless you were willing to give me what I want."

"What is it—what is it you want?"

"I want you to be to me what you have been to Truitt."

"And if—if I refuse?"

"I have never yet told that I caught Truitt and a sun-browned woman alone in an Ottawa hotel under circumstances—I have no reason to love him. I have refrained from telling only for your sake. I—Why do you force me to say this? I have no wish to be brutal to you. Seeing you has turned my head. But you will not—surely you can not refuse."

She dropped back into a chair, covering her face with her hands. When she looked up, she wore again the strange rapt expression.

"You said," she whispered chokingly, "you said—you would pay."

"Yes, yes!" he cried eagerly.

"You are trying to rob Mark Truitt—to force him out of the company. Will you—give that up?" Still in the same broken whisper.

"Even that. You are worth everything."

"And will you give me time—to send him away—and never let him know?"

"It is for you to make conditions. Ah! my dear—"

In triumph Quinby stepped toward her and bent over to take her hand.

"Don't do that!" said a voice behind him.

Quinby whirled. For a long silent minute the trio faced one another.

Then Mark, white of face, hands working convulsively, went slowly to the stupefied Quinby, who seemed turned to stone. He did not resist even when Mark's hand leaped up and caught him cruelly by the throat. He was pressed back until his back met the wall. The grip tightened. Quinby's face grew purple. He squirmed and tried to cry out, but only a hoarse gurgle resulted.

Kazia came to herself. She sprang to her feet and caught Mark's arm, breaking his grip.

"Don't hurt him. He's not worth it."

Gently, without taking his eyes from Quinby, Mark freed his arm from her clasp. But he did not touch Quinby again. The first murderous impulse died. He turned contemptuously away from him.

Quinby, released from the cruel hand and eyes, started across the room. Mark whirled upon him once more.

"Stop!"

Quinby stopped. "This," he said weakly, "is a trap."

"Set by yourself." Mark turned to Kazia with a helpless mirthless laugh. "What is my cue? Shall I kick him down stairs—or spring his dirty trap?"

"Let him go," she answered listlessly.

Mark shook his head. "Not without paying. He said," grimly, "he was willing to pay."

"I'm not afraid of you," Quinby muttered a feeble defiance. "What can you say of me that isn't true of you?"

"Ah!" Mark drew a sharp whistling breath. Quinby shrang back, his hands going protectively to his aching throat. "Now you shall pay. You—" He broke off with a gesture of disgust. "I find I've no stomach for blackmail just now. I'll telephone Henley to come over. He'll know how to handle this situation."

Then Quinby was indeed fear-struck. He clutched Mark's arm tightly. "Don't tell him!" he quavered. "We can settle this ourselves. I didn't really intend to force you out of the company, only to—to frighten you a little."

Mark jerked his arm free. "So you're a coward as well as a fraud! But I knew that before. This is too sickening. You'd better go."

Quinby started again to go.

"Wait!"

Quinby waited.

"You seem to be afraid of Henley. You have reason. Tomorrow at ten-thirty you have an engagement to meet him at his office—I have just made it for both of you. At eleven I will meet him. You know best what Henley in his present mood will do if he gets wind of your latest adventure in philanthropy. Now go."

Quinby went. The next morning, prompt on the hour, he kept his engagement with Henley.

A weakness for epigrams has defeated more than one fair project. After a discreet interval—long enough, as he thought, for the interment of the dead past—Jeremiah Quinby sought to revive the paleontological propaganda. He found that for once the public memory was long and laid more stress on the fateful twins of production than on ichthyosauri and kindred monsters. The air was darkened with poisoned barbs of satire and derision. There fell a great philanthropist, pierced to the heart. That is to say, Quinby retired from the realm of beneficence and his rival reigned absolute once more.

A heavy troubled silence was in the little room. Kazia stood passively by the table, waiting for Mark to speak. After a long while he raised his eyes to hers.

"Kazia, you poor romantic fool! Did you think any amount of money was worth that—even if he had kept his word? When I think what—oh, how could you think of it!"

"I wanted," she answered in a queer lifeless voice, as if benumbed by this crisis into which they had stumbled, "I wanted to do one thing for you—and your happy city."

"My happy city! What happiness could it have had, built on that? And I—hadn't you given me enough?"

"I gave you only love."

"Only—!"

"It was all I had to give. It wasn't enough."

"I wish I could have given as much as you." The wistful words slipped out.

He stepped closer to her.

"Kazia, this has got to end."

"Yes."

"You must marry me tomorrow."

Life, and with it pain, flickered once more.

"You are trying to give something now. But I'm glad you said that."

"I'm asking you to give something more. You will?"

"Why do you ask it?"

"Because I've hurt you enough. I did hurt you when I let you—led you to sin, even though we kept it a secret from the world. I want to make you happy—you said yourself we've broken a law. I want happiness—and I can't have it, knowing that for all I've taken from you I've given nothing."

She tried to smile; the sight of it cut to his heart. "Every reason but the one. But I'm glad you wouldn't lie to me now." The smile faded. "You see. I can't."

"Kazia, dear," he pleaded, "we started wrong—let's begin over again. Let's give love a new birth."

His voice rang with a longing she could not understand, but he could not touch her. She shook her head spiritlessly.

"There can be no new birth so long as there is memory. You could never forget that I—that I am not clean."

"Do you think me so small as to hold my own fault against you? It is my sin, too." He stepped closer, reaching out his arms to take her. "Come, dear, your poor little reasons aren't enough."

She shrank away from his clasp, trembling. Into the tired white face came a look of fear and despair. She glanced this way and that, as though she sought an escape. Her hands went to her face. Then she forced them down and her eyes to his.

"I thought—I thought you understood. . . . I—I wasn't clean—before we sinned. The doctor who helped me, I—" She could say no more.

Suspicion had not prepared him for this. He stared foolishly at her, showing how he recoiled from the fact her broken words had revealed. He did not then think it strange that the shame of a woman he did not love should stab so deeply.

"Kazia, how could you—how could you!"

After a while he forgot his own pain a little in pity for the silent stricken woman. Again his arms reached out for her and would not be denied.

"It must make no difference." His sternness was all for himself. "What am I to blame you? You sold your body to live. I gave my soul to feel others squirming under my feet. You hurt only yourself. I've hurt every one I touched. I hurt you. If I hadn't been a coward years ago when we first loved, you would never have been tempted. Your sin is only a part of mine. It is you who have most to forgive."

Slowly she raised her head to look at him. "And you," came a broken incredulous whisper, "and you would marry me—even now?"

"All the more now!"

For an instant a faint pitiable hope, defying knowledge, shone in her eyes. "Have I been mistaken? Only love could ignore—ah! don't lie to me now. It wouldn't be kindness. Is it just pay—or love?"

He tried to look away from her and could not. Her eyes held his, seeking through them to hunt out the last truth hidden in his soul. With a rough convulsive movement he drew her head down on his shoulder.

"How can I know what it is? It must be love, since I need you and want to make you happy. If it isn't now, surely love will come when we start right. Kazia, don't refuse me this chance to make up to you a little of the harm I've done you."

Her answer was a stifled sob. He felt her body relax; her head rested heavily on his shoulder.

She released herself. He did not try to hold her. They faced each other in a heavy throbbing silence.

His soul quivered with the cruelty of it; it would have been infinitely easier for him if she had been the unfaithful one. His words echoed mockingly in his ears, torturing him with their hopeless futility.

"You will not?"

"You couldn't say it—and I don't want pay."

The sight of her had become more than he could endure. He turned away and dropped into a chair, letting his head fall to the table.

After a little he felt her hand gently smoothing his hair. And soon she began to speak in a voice unsteady at first but gathering strength as she went on.

"You mustn't reproach yourself. I know you'd love me if you could. And you mustn't think I refuse just for your sake. I'd do what you want—since you want it so much—only it would be misery for me always. You wouldn't want that. . . . And this—it seems I've always known it would come. It was a chance I took for a few months' happiness. I've had my happiness. . . . You haven't harmed me—I beg you to believe you haven't harmed me."

"Kazia—"

But the hoarse cry died away. There was nothing to say. His humiliation was complete. Magdalen that she was, he looked up to her from depths of self-abasement she could never know.

He Felt Her Body Relax—Her Head Rested Heavily on His Shoulder.

The voice was growing unsteady again. "When I think how it might have ended—if you hadn't come tonight—! I'm glad you came—to save me from —that. . . . And now—I think you had better—go. . . ."

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Penitent.

It was a red sunrise, that Sabbath morning, and the ruddy glow lingered in the eastern sky long after the sun had swung clear above the hills. A slanting shaft found his window and fell upon him as he dreamed. He stirred restively.

He awoke slowly, reluctantly, drifting toward consciousness through a golden haze that vibrated with far-away dwindling harmonies.

"Where have I heard that before?"

After a little he remembered—a youth, full of dreams and credulous, joyously facing his great adventure.

"And tomorrow I set out on a new adventure. It was a long way from there to here. . . . I wonder, would any man, given the choice, travel his road a second time?"

He rose and went to the window.

Two years had passed, crowded with effort, crowned with achievement. From the window where he stood, still seeking to recover the lost harmonies, he could see the beginning of his happy city, all ready for the great experiment.

He bathed and dressed—in the new bathroom that was his one concession to the luxuriousness of the old life—and descended to the kitchen. The pleasant odor of frying ham met his nostrils; there was a hotel in Bethel now at which the Truitts generally had their meals, but sometimes, of a leisurely Sabbath morning, Simon still served as cook.

But the bent old man at the south window had forgotten breakfast. For a little Mark watched him without salutation.

"Good morning, father," he said at last.

"Good morning, Mark." Simon turned reluctantly from the window. "I was jest thinkin' it'll be 20 years tomorrow ye went away—an' now there's that."

"Yes. Your dream has come true. If you live until tomorrow night you'll have seen it all—steel made in Bethel."

Breakfast ready, they sat down and began the meal in silence. Mark ate lightly, absently.

Ever since Mark had returned, Simon had been vaguely sensible of a suffering to which some solacing word might be said. But the word would not come to his unschooled lips.

"I wish," Simon thought, "I could give him something."

It was a real suffering Simon sensed, no day without its hour of payment, no hour so heavy as on that Sabbath morning.

From across the town came a mellow clamor, the voice of the new church bell calling the faithful.

The clamor ceased and after an interval resumed for a few last taps before he rose and went into the house for his hat and cane. When he emerged again he found Simon sitting on the front stoop.

"Goin' to church?"

"I guess I'd better."

"Yes. Courtney likes ye to. Do ye," Simon asked suddenly, "still believe what he preaches?"

Mark hesitated a moment. "I suppose I never did. I'd like to, but I can't. It takes a certain quality of mind, I suppose—or early habit. I can't quite see—" There was that in Mark's tone which made Simon look up quickly. "I can't see the logic of letting another's suffering pay for our sins."

"Ye'll be late," Simon suggested.

Doctor Hedges, driving along the valley road, drew up at the station until the eleven o'clock train, having discharged its Bethel passengers, sped onward. The passengers were two, a man and a woman, strangers to the doctor and therefore alien to Bethel. The woman stood on the otherwise deserted platform, looking uncertainly around her. The man made directly for the doctor.

"Do you," he demanded, "know where Mark Truit lives?"

"Why, yes." The doctor bestowed a friendly smile on the stranger. "I guess I do."

"Can you show me how to find it?"

"Yes." Hedges glanced toward the woman; she was entering the station. "I can do better. I can take you there."

"If you will." And the stranger promptly entered the buggy.

The doctor clucked to his horse and turned hospitably, with conversational intent, to his guest. But the latter forestalled him.

"Live here?"

"Between whiles."

"Ha!" The stranger smiled, a brief wintry smile. "Doctor, I see. Do you know Truitt?"

"Well," Hedges spat ruminatively, "that's a pretty risky thing to say of any man, but I guess—"

"What do they think of him here?"

"They think he's a great man—and it's his own—"

"He's a great mechanic," said the guest shortly.

"I," drawled the doctor, "know more about men than mechanics, but—"

"What do you think of him?" the guest interrupted again.

The doctor, hoping to complete at least one sentence, quickened his drawl. "He's a man who's either losing himself or finding himself, I'm not sure—"

"Meaning?"

"You wouldn't," chuckled the doctor, "have time for the explanation." He drew up before the little cottage. "He lives here."

"Hardly!" the visitor retorted. "I take the three o'clock train. Much obliged." He sprang, more briskly than his rotundity promised, out of the buggy.

The doctor drove away still chuckling. The chuckle would not have died even had he known his passenger to be none other than that Henley whose star, flashing with comet-like swiftness and brilliancy above the horizon of speculation, had in two years achieved full planetary dignity and importance. But the doctor was not a student of Wall street astronomy.

"Humph!" The luminary surveyed the weather-beaten little cottage with its unkempt yard and near-by smithy. "So he lives here. Affectation, of course!"

He strode up the path and saluted the old man on the stoop.

"Mr. Truitt lives here, I believe?"

"I'm Simon Truitt. But I reckon ye want Mark, Mr. Henley."

"Ha! You know me. His father, I suppose?"

"Yes. I saw ye once, years ago, when he was in the hospital."

"I remember," said Henley, who had forgotten that incident completely. "Is Truitt about?"

"He's at church."

"Church! Surely not a habit?"

"He goes gener'ly, since he come back."

"Hmm! Something new for Truitt." Henley frowned. "And my time's short. I suppose I may as well save some of it by going over the plant now. There's no objection, I suppose?"

"No; I," Simon ventured uncertainly, "I was jest about to go over myself."

"I'll be glad of your company," Henley graciously replied. "Shall we start?"

An hour later Henley emerged from the shadowy finishing mill, blinking hard in the midday's sunshine and trying to revise his estimate of the situation.

He followed Simon out on a tiny cape that jutted into the river, whence they could see other evidences of Truitt's lucidity—the hospital, the bank, the store, the cluster of homes gleaming white on the hillside.

And Henley saw—not as the experts had seen, happy if they perceived all that had been reduced to fact—but with the eyes of one whose greatness was to see what might be, what could be. And as he looked part, at least, of Truitt's dream was unfolded before him. The valley a teeming, throbbing citadel of industry. The city clambering over the slopes, capturing the heights, reclaiming other slopes from the forest, until in length and breadth, in numbers and importance, it rivaled that other fastness where he, the master, had been known only as a lieutenant. The creator in him, not yet killed, but only obscured by the madness of exploitation, thrilled at the sight.

"He sees big," he muttered. "He sees big. I didn't think it was in him."

He stood on the point, scanning thoughtfully the noble valley, forgetting his silent companion. "He's picked out a great site. . . ." And then to Henley came a vision of his own.

That city and citadel his, creature of his genius and might, doing his bidding, yielding him homage and tribute, carrying forth his fame to the paling of lesser men's reputations, capital of an empire—his empire.

"By God!" he breathed aloud. "By God! . . . And it's possible—how did the builders of cities overlook this place? . . . It would be better than doing faker's tricks with stocks and bonds."

Gumdrops.

An old man in Indianapolis, who has lost all his teeth, takes his "toothlessness" philosophically.

It is difficult for him to articulate as he did in the days of his youth, and he admits that gums are not quite as useful as teeth when it comes to talking.

In fact his sole dependence on his gums in his old days has led him to refer to his misfortune cheerfully by calling his words "gumdrops."

DEATHS.

Wednesday morning at 7:30 o'clock death claimed one of Pleasant Gap's oldest and most highly respected citizens when Henry N. Twitmire succumbed to a complication of diseases after being confined to bed for only two weeks. He was seventy-two years of age. Funeral services will be held Friday morning in the Methodist church in Pleasant Gap and burial will be made in the Zion cemetery. Mr. Twitmire was born in Zion but at an early age moved with his parents to Pleasant Gap where he has lived continuously. At the outbreak of the war of the rebellion he enlisted in the cause of the north and served his country during the entire period of hostilities. After the war he returned home and engaged in the wagon making and cabinet making trade, in which work he was engaged up until a short time before his fatal sickness.

Surviving him are his wife, who before marriage was Miss Miley Brooks, and the following children: Mrs. J. Abner Noll, Mrs. W. H. Noll, Mrs. Harry Hile, Mrs. Jared Ebey, Mrs. Ward Showers, of Pleasant Gap; Mrs. James Corl, Chicago; Miss Mary, at home; Harry, Pitcairn. All the children were at the bedside of their father when the death angel came. After attending the public schools of his home county he entered the West Chester Military Academy at West Chester, where he graduated. He went to Pittsburgh thirty-five years ago and entered the lumber business, which he continued till about fourteen years ago, when he established lumber yards in Harrisburg and Philadelphia. He sold out all his business interests about four years ago and retired from active life. Three children survive.

Mrs. Mariah George, familiarly known as "Polly" George, died at her home in Aaronsburg Monday afternoon at four o'clock, after a week's illness with consumption, aged seventy-four years and eight months. Funeral services will be held in the United Evangelical church Friday morning and interment will follow in the cemetery at Aaronsburg, Rev. W. H. Brown officiating. She was a widow. No children survive, and only one brother, namely, Henry Frantz of Sunbury.

Funeral services were held at his late home Tuesday and interment was made in the Fairview cemetery, Millheim, Rev. W. Donat of the Reformed church officiating. Mr. and Mrs. James Poorman closed their house at Boalsburg on Tuesday and departed for the west, where they expect to spend the winter with relatives in Nebraska, Kansas, and Wisconsin. Several years ago they spent the winter there and were so kindly entertained, that they felt like making the trip again.

Some time ago a flower bed was made on the central square in Boalsburg under the direction of T. D Boal. The civic club was requested to plant flowers and take care of them. At a meeting of the club it was decided to plant tulip bulbs this fall. Two hundred bulbs were purchased. On Saturday several of the ladies planted them; the outside and inner rings are of red tulip bulbs, and the middle rings are bulbs of yellow tulips.

Friday was a very stormy day. C. W. Corl was threshing grain at Frank Whitehills, at Houserville, and several small children were playing near the straw stack, when part of it was blown over and covered a little four-year-old boy named Walter. The other children ran into the house to tell their mother who hurried out. Work was commenced at once and in a short time the child was found lying on his face, none the worse for having been hidden about eighteen or twenty feet from the outer part of the stack.

A number of the class in agriculture of the Boalsburg high school entered the corn judging contest at State College on Saturday. Louis Rothrock won first prize, a two and a half gold piece; Ida Segner won second prize, a good book on agriculture; Martha Houtz, third, a blue ribbon; Edwin Dale of State College, fourth, a blue ribbon; and Riley Stover, fifth, a blue ribbon. Some of the girls had bread, cake and canned fruit at the State College exhibit but as yet they have not heard the result of contest.

The attendance for the second month of school was 98 per cent. for the girls and 98 per cent. for the boys. Those present every day in second month were Daisy Rowe, Martha Houtz, Edwina Wieland, Ida Segner, Rebekah Wieland, Kathryn Koch, Grace Wieland, Mildred Wieland, Russell Ishler, Forrest Miller, Riley Stover, Myles Thomas, Boyd Wieland, Charles Hosterman, Samuel Ross, Louis Rothrock, Cyrus Wagner and Earl Williams.

LUTHER DAY SERVICE.

Rev. Glanding, Lutheran Pastor in Bellefonte, Delivers Masterful Sermon on the Reformer.

Shortly after last anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, the Reformer, Rev. W. M. B. Glanding, pastor of the Lutheran church in Bellefonte, delivered a masterful sermon on Luther, and following are excerpts of the discourse :

Text: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." Ps. 46:1.

Men die. Principles live. A movement of reform may be started by some and completed by others. In the church at Wittenberg, Germany, there is precious human dust. A little over four hundred and thirty-one years ago Martin Luther was born. He was not opposed to the Catholic church as an institution. He protested as a loyal son of the church against the sins and errors of the ruling element. He always appealed to Scripture and the teachings of the fathers. In the course of the controversy he begged for the privilege of defense before an imperial council. The request was granted. He appeared at the diet of Worms on April 18th, 1521. Carlyle calls this the greatest scene in modern history.

1. Preparations for the appearance at the diet. When Charles V., an Austro-Spaniard, came to the throne of the Holy Roman Empire, he found the realm in a state of greatest commotion. The Turks threatened him in the south. The king of France, his rival, checked his ambition. The Primate at Rome claimed his loyalty. The German princes demanded that much attention be given to the interests of their states. The religious troubles were assuming a threatening attitude. In his mind an imperial diet or congress is necessary. This assembly met in Worms in January, 1521, and lasted several months. About one month after the opening a papal brief or letter came which urged the Emperor to enforce the bill of excommunication against Luther. By the remonstrances of the German princes Charles recalled the edict which commanded Luther's writings to be burned throughout the Empire and substituted a provisional order to deliver these books into the keeping of the magistrates. The friends of the Reformer insisted on Luther being heard at the diet and a safe-conduct or passport being granted to him. The Emperor yielded.

2. The journey from Wittenberg to Worms. On April 2, the monk started. This step required uncommon courage. His path was surrounded with dark forebodings. At Leipsic no respect was shown him. At Nauenberg a portrait of Savonarola was thrust before his face. When his safe-conduct had only three days more an unsuccessful attempt was made to turn him away from his course Spalitin, his true friend, sent a messenger with the advice, "Do not enter Worms." He at once replied with these memorable words: "Go and tell your master that even should there be as many devils in Worms as tiles on the housetops still I would enter it." Nothing could turn him from his purpose. Into Worms he would go and into Worms he went.

3 Before the diet. The news of Luther's arrival in Worms spread rapidly throughout the whole city. The Emperor summoned the council. The Chancellor of Flanders advised that the monk be gotten rid of at once. Charles declares that he will keep his promise and observe the safe-conduct. The hereditary marshal of the Empire leads Luther at 4 o'clock in the afternoon on April 17, 1521, before the august assembly of the Emperor, electors, dukes, moregraves, archbishops, princes, counts, papal nuncios; in all two hundred and four persons. Such a spectacle was never before presented. The Chancellor of the Archbishop of Treves requires Luther to answer two questions: "Do you acknowledge these books to have been written by you?" pointing with the finger to about twenty volumes which had been placed on the table. "Are you pre-

"Stone Pile" Causes Row in Schuylkill County—Three Hurt in Auto Accidents — Children Injured By Firearms.

Court at Pottsville directed District Attorney Whitehouse to bring mandamus proceedings against the County Commissioners compelling them to show why they refuse to obey the law, which requires them to give married men in jail employment and pay the families of the men sixty-seven cents a day out of the prisoners' earnings. The Commissioners declared that if they start to obey this law the wife of every lazy husband in the county will have the head of the house arrested for non-support and the county will be compelled to pay out ten thousand dollars annually for this purpose.

Two children were injured by careless use of firearms by youngsters. John Meisner, of Waynesboro, was shot by Robert Harbugh, a bullet from the latter's rifle penetrating the other's face just below the eye. Bedelia Robertson, daughter of J. M. Robertson, Mont Alto, was shot in the hip by her younger brother while the latter was shooting at random near their home.

Mrs. Ellsworth Young, aged twenty years, who resided with her husband's parents in Duboistown, was fatally burned when in trying to light a fire she poured kerosene over the paper and wood and ignited her clothing. Crying loudly for help she rushed from the house and ran until she fell unconscious. All her clothing was burned off and she died in the hospital in agony.

Falling down a flight of stairs at her home, as she was coming down to breakfast, Mrs. Joseph Simons, a well-known society woman in Canonsburg, was seriously injured, while her 8-months-old son, who was in her arms, was so seriously hurt that he died shortly afterwards. As a result of her injuries and the shock of her child's tragic death, Mrs. Simons is at her home in a serious condition.

Jacob Stark and Walter Klemick were injured at Shamokin when an automobile driven by Albert Grosser, Ashland, struck them at a street corner. Stark, who is the most seriously hurt, was knocked down and run over. At about the same time Dominick Dunes, ten years old, of Maysville, was seriously if not fatally injured, when a car, driven by W. H. Lee, struck him.

While Ralph Fickes, aged twenty-one, of Wyandt, Bedford County, and his cousin, Ross Motto, also twenty-one, were hunting near Pavia, Motto tripped and fell, accidentally discharging his gun. The charge entered Fickes' right thigh, and while he was being hurried to the hospital he died from loss of blood.

While a number of men were working in a gangway at the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company's Big Mountain Colliery, John Hogush and John Kruback were tamping a shot when it exploded. Hogush was instantly killed and his companion seriously injured. Several more workmen had narrow escapes.

Opposition to the revival to be conducted in Reading during January, 1915, by Dr. Henry W. Stough, the evangelist, has sprung up among clergymen of the Lutheran, Reformed and Episcopal denominations, and it is likely that churches of these sects will not participate in the campaign.

Spelling books and readers for their education and eighty-one volumes of "copyright fiction" for the library were furnished the prisoners at the jail by the Reading School Board. The novels were carefully selected with a view to the helpful effect their reading may have on the prisoners' lives.

John Badgley, of Prospect Park, was severely burned about the face and neck and was forced to flee from his home in his night clothing when fire started in an upper room of the house. Badgley carried his wife and baby from the house and then returned to fight the blaze.

Fred W. Weidner, an Allentown silk worker, thirty-six years old, committed suicide by taking poison tablets, leaving a note to his mother that he was tired of life on account of constant disagreements with his wife.

Thieves relieved Jasper Poust, an Orange Township farmer, of the necessity of going to market with twenty-six ducks, which he had already crated. They drove up to the barn and took crate and all.

U. S. TO EVACUATE VERA CRUZ NOV. 23

Guarantees Given by Carranza and Convention.

WARSHIP SENT TO TAMPICO

State Department Fears Taking Of Great Prize For All Revolutionists In Mexico—Warship To Tampico.

Washington, D. C.—Monday, November 23, has been set as the date for the evacuation of Vera Cruz by United States troops.

Secretary Bryan issued this announcement:

"Both General Carranza and the convention at Aguas Calientes having given the assurances and guarantees we requested, it is the purpose of the administration to withdraw the troops of the United States from Vera Cruz on Monday, the 23rd of November.

"All persons there, for whose personal safety this government has made itself responsible, have left the city. The priests and nuns who had taken refuge there and for whose safety fears were entertained, are now on their way to this country."

As far as is known there has been no final decision as to when and to whom the more than $1,000,000 of Mexican customs moneys now held by the United States shall be paid. Both Carranza and the Aguas Callentes convention have given guarantees that customs duties collected at Vera Cruz will not be reimposed. In view of the complications which might arise, however, in the event Carranza were driven from power by Villa's army, supporting General Gutierrez, the convention's new provisional president, it has been suggested that payment of the money might be withheld pending a clarification of the situation.

Warship To Tampico.

Orders were given to the battleship Texas, now at Galveston, to proceed at once to Mexican waters.

This abrupt action of the Navy Department was taken after news had arrived here that General Villa's forces were marching from San Luis Potosi to attack and capture Tampico. Secretary of State Bryan conferred with the President about it and later there was a conference between Mr. Bryan and the Secretary of the Navy.

The quick action of the government in dispatching the Texas to Mexican waters is due to the stand taken by the State Department some time ago that Tampico is a free port.

WANT BOTH TO LEAVE MEXICO

"Generals" Invite Carranza and Villa to Resign.

SITUATION GROWS MUDDLED

Our Government Disgusted With the Vacillating Character Of the Military Leaders, Who Are Constantly Changing Sides.

El Paso, Texas.—Official reports from Mexico City said that several chiefs, headed by Gen. Pablo Gonzales, Carranza's principal leader, has sent messages to the "First Chief" and Provisional President Gutierrez, again appealing that both Carranza and Villa resign their positions.

It also was reported, but unconfirmed, from the Villa side that Gonzales had deserted Carranza and offered his services to the convention.

The signers of the two telegrams included Gonzales, Gen. Luco Blanco and Gen. Anontio Villareal, who had acted as president of the convention before the election of Gutierrez. They asked Carranza to resign "in order to prevent circumstances growing graver." They advised the first chief that they also had sought the elimination of Villa.

"Should he not retire absolutely," they said, "we pledge ourselves to subjugate him to law and order."

From Gutierrez they requested that he order Villa to leave the country. They promised that they also would arrange for Carranza to leave Mexico.

Rafael Muzquiz, Carranza's consular chief, stated that he had official advices from Mexico City that a total of 108,000 troops had remained loyal to the first chief. Villa agents never have claimed that more than one-half that number were in the regular division commanded by the northern chieftain.

DEMOCRATS MAJORITY 31.

Belated Election Gains Increase Lead Of Party.

Washington, D. C. — Democratic gains in belated election returns have increased the majority of the party in the next House of Representatives to 31, according to an unofficial list compiled by South Trimble, clerk of the House.

The line-up under this compilation, which has not yet been officially verified, is:

Democrats, 233; Republicans, 193; Progressives, 7; Independent, 1; Socialist, 1. Total, 435.

As it requires 218 votes to control the House, these figures show that the majority party will have 15 more than enough for this purpose.

Reports to Mr. Trimble stated that Fred C. Stevens, of Minnesota, has been defeated by C. C. Van Dyke, Democrat, and that W. E. Williams, Democrat, was re-elected a representative-at-large from Illinois. Earlier returns had indicated Republican victories in both these cases.

FIRST EQUESTRIAN STATUE.

Memorial To General Kearney To Be Unveiled At Arlington.

Washington, D. C.—With impossible military ceremonies, the first equestrian statue ever raised in Arlington Cemetery—that of Gen. Philip Kearney, formerly of New Jersey—was unveiled Wednesday. A TRAGEDY ON COAST LINER

Prominent Man Killed and Two Wounded.

SHIP'S CAPTAIN IS SHOT

George Batchelor Perkins, Architect, Of Boston, Appears In Pajamas and Shoots.

Charleston, S. C.—F. W. Hinman, business manager of the Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville, and president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, was fatally wounded, and Captain Andrew D. Ingram, master of the vessel, and B. H. Wright, of Utica, N. Y., a passenger, were seriously wounded by a passenger who booked as George Batchelor Perkins, an architect, of Boston, Mass., on the Clyde Line steamship Mohawk, when that vessel was off the North Carolina coast, bound from New York for Charleston.

Mr. Hinman died 12 hours after sustaining two fatal wounds in the abdomen from a .32-calibre revolver. Accompanied by his widow and a son-in-law, Mr. Hinman's body was carried by rail to Jacksonville, Fla.

A preliminary inquest was held by United States Commissioner Arthur Huger. Perkins, who heard the warrant read without apparently being affected and who showed an attitude of not knowing what he had done, did not attend nor did Captain Ingram or Mr. Wright, both of whom are in a local hospital. It was decided to hold Perkins for trial on the charge of having killed Mr. Hinman.

It was brought out at the hearing that Perkins had been taking what he called headache powders to excess, as his roommate, N. K. Wentworth, of Connecticut, said he was suspicious of Perkins because of his taking the drug.

The story of the tragedy as brought out at the hearing was substantially as follows:

Soon after 8 o'clock Perkins, clad only in pajamas and raincoat, approached Captain Ingram and Mr. and Mrs. Hinman, who were in conversation. He addressed a remark to Captain Ingram, who replied that Perkins must wear more suitable apparel if he wished to mingle with the other passengers.

Perkins thereupon whipped out a revolver and fired at Captain Ingram's abdomen, the bullet taking effect.

He then shot Mr. Hinman and turned the weapon on Mr. Wright, who was reclining on a settee. He shot Mr. Hinman again and tried to shoot Captain Ingram, the bullet going wild. He then turned the pistol on himself, but its five cartridges had been discharged.

The steward and assistant steward of the Mohawk and several passengers hearing the shots rushed to the scene and overpowered Perkins, who told his captors they could do as they pleased with him, but witnesses alleged that he wanted to get others who were on the steamship.

MOB PLUNDERS BANK.

Soldiers Lead Attack On Leading Financial Institution Of Mexico.

Vera Cruz.—According to private telegrams received here, the National Bank of Mexico City has been sacked by a mob led by Constitutionalist soldiers.

Mexico City.—It is reported here that the port of Acapulco, on the Pacific, has been occupied by American marines. The occupation is said to have followed a request of the inhabitants, who were suffering great privations owing to the revolution.

Washington, D. C.—Navy Department officials suggested that an explanation of the report that American marines had been landed at Acapulco might be found in the landing of food supplies from a naval vessel dispatched there to relieve famine conditions through Red Cross officials in San Francisco.

DRINK A TOAST TO THE ALLIES

Remarkable Scenes at the Lord Mayor's Banquet.

KITCHENER'S STRONG TALK

Representatives Of All the Allies and Neutral Powers Attend the Function Which Is Declared To Be Without Precedent.

London.—Scenes of extraordinary enthusiasm were witnessed at the Guild Hall on the occasion of the inaugural banquet of the new lord mayor of London, Sir Charles Johnston, who succeeds Sir Thomas V. Bowster. Added interest attached to the gathering by reason of the special circumstances of the times and the presence of the principal ministers of the Crown responsible for the conduct of the war and the diplomatic representatives of the allied nations.

Guild Hall has been the scene of many civic and national functions in the past 500 years, but seldom has there been one which so strongly appealed to the popular imagination.

The guests, numbering a thousand and including the leading statesmen, diplomats and financiers, entered the civic headquarters of London between lines of khaki-clad riflemen. As each dignitary entered the reception hall he was greeted with rounds of cheers, but the real outbursts were reserved for Premier Asquith, Earl Kitchener, secretary for war; Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the Admiralty; the Japanese, Russian and French ambassadors, the Belgian Minister and the commander of the Canadian contingent.

As these entered the hall, which was decorated with the flags and coats of arms of the allied nations, the enthusiasm rose to a high pitch, the entire assembly rising to welcome them. The military men, including Lord Kitchener, wore service uniforms of khaki; the ambassadors and other diplomats were in the brilliant uniforms of their rank.

The formal toast to the King and royal family having been proposed, ex-Premier Arthur J. Balfour proposed The Allies. He emphasized that the toast was without precedent, but, he added, "we are living in times that are also without precedent, when the whole world is either in arms or in anxious expectation."

The Court of Appeals decided the election was fraudulent and dismissed the circuit judge who had been elected.

TO PREVENT MEAT FAMINE IN STATE

College Man Suggests Directory Ballot.

MAKE LOW WATER RECORD

Tener Names Delegates to Mining Congress—Like Accident Reports For State and Native—Bigelow Exonerated.

Harrisburg.—Steps to prevent possibility of a meat famine because of the quarantine for the foot and mouth disease were taken by the State Live Stock Sanitary Board when arrangements were made for the slaughter of sound cows from infected herds. These cattle will be inspected before and after killing so that there will be no chance of infection by the meat.

The disease is reported from 131 points in the State, exclusive of stock yards.

State Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon issued a statement showing the dangers of infection of human beings which may come from the foot and mouth disease now prevalent among the cattle in almost a score of counties.

He says the records show the possibility of transference of the disease from animals through milk and States.

"As a matter of protection against the possibility of infection the use of raw milk may be discontinued," he said. "A safety factor is to pasteurize the milk. The following is a simple method which may be used. Place a saucer in a pail seven or eight inches in diameter and about the same height. Set the milk bottle on this. Remove the paper cap from the milk bottle. Pour in the pail a sufficient quantity of luke-warm water to half cover the bottle. Watch the water and as soon as it has boiled twenty minutes remove the bottle of milk and allow it to cool slowly."

Suggests Directory Ballot.

To aid voters in selecting the most efficient men for public office, S. Edgar Dunlap, a senior in the Pennsylvania State College, has suggested a ballot reform that would list the candidate's pedigree along with his name. Dunlap terms it "the directory ballot." His scheme to give the voter complete information about all officeseekers is said to have received the indorsement of authorities on the question of political science.

The ballot would appear as follows:

Factory Inspector.
(One to be voted for).

John Doe (R.)
Age, 35.
Residence, 399 Spruce Street.
Occupation, bartender.
Education, grammar school.
Public offices previously held, Common Councilman, School Director.

Richard Doe (D.)
Age, 40.
Residence, 547 West Walnut Street.
Occupation, factory inspector.
Education, high school.
Public offices previously held, factory inspector (two terms).

According to the directory ballot, the age, residence, occupation, education and public offices previously held, whether appointive or elective, would appear immediately beneath the name of each candidate. A candidate's age would, said Mr. Dunlap, denote his experience in life; his residence represents his presumptive degree of respectability; his occupation tends to represent his moral attitude, and the public offices previously held signify what he has done in public life. By means of this authentic information, sworn to by the candidate the voter would be able to defeat the unfit man, who once had obtained office, since he would have the knowledge of his lack of qualifications.

Low Water Record.

Reports made to the State Water Supply Commission indicated that the Susquehanna, Lehigh and other rivers had shown the lowest flow of water in years, the Lehigh being very close to a record. The Susquehanna is lower at some points on the north and west branches than ever known. Western streams which went close to lowest water in October have shown slight gains. The commission granted permits for sixteen bridges and to the city of York to change channel of Codorus Creek, and the city of Erie to wall Mill Creek.

Delegates To Mining Congress.

Governor Tener announced the appointment of delegates to represent the Commonwealth at the American Mining Congress to be held in Phoenix, Ariz., December 7-11. Among them are W. J. Richards, Pottsville; Samuel D. Warringer, Philadelphia, and John Markle, Jeddo.

Thanksgiving Proclamation Issued.

Governor Tener issued the Thanksgiving proclamation to the people of Pennsylvania, setting aside Thursday, November 26, as the day for its observance.

Sentenced to Attend Revival.

Mayor Reed sentenced a man taken before him for drunkenness and disorder to attend the Stough meetings now in progress. He told him they were to reform just such men.

Happy Father Wanted Generous Contribution Entered Under the Proper Heading.

When Mr. Otis returned from the office one afternoon, he was met at the door by his wife, who cried, excitedly:

"Oh, Herbert, love, I received a lovely letter from father today."

"Yes, my dear?" queried he.

"Yes, dearest," repeated Mrs. Otis, enthusiastically, "he congratulates us on the birth of our baby."

"That's good," was the reply.

"Yes," went on Mrs. Otis, "and he says it will cost us more to live now—that babies are expensive."

"I suppose that is true, dear," assented the hubsand.

"And, Herbert, just think!" said the wife, joyfully, "father has sent us a check for $1,000. Isn't that just lovely of him?"

"I should say it was!" said Otis. "I'll sit right down, dear, and thank him for his generaus contribution to the Fresh Heir fund."

He Took the Hint.

"How radiant you are tonight, Madeline," he exclaimed enthusiastically, as they met at the corner. "You actually look fit to eat."

"I feel that way, too," was the naive rejoinder.

Whereupon one week's salary went to smash in the nearest lobster palace.

BIRD SANCTUARY IN ORCHARD

Farmers and Fruit Growers Urged to Plant Trees to Provide Nesting Places for the Robin.

One hundred and seventy-six species of insects attack the apple tree, while apple-producing states spend as high as $3,000,000 for spraying trees to keep down the codling moth. Instead of putting poison (which often kills the birds), on your trees, why not encourage these tireless little workers to come and rid your fruit trees of insect pests? Every orchard should be a bird sanctuary. What are you doing to make a safe refuge of yours? In return for shelter and protection your feathered friends will brighten your little world with their beautiful plumage, while working every hour in the day for you, and sing glad songs of thanksgiving while they work.

The Liberty Bell Bird club of the Farm Journal says that the destructive insect invasion is not caused altogether by the killing of the birds themselves who would eat the insects, but largely because the farmer has cut down the trees and shrubbery, depriving his former little neighbors of their nesting places without providing others. It is urging the farmers and fruit growers to plant those trees and shrubs which will entice the foraging robin away from his favorite cherry tree, and yet maintains that he is entitled to a little of even this choice fruit in return for all the ravening fruit pests he devours. It claims that he will not, however, bother the cherries if he has Russian mulberries which ripen at the same time. This tireless forager also prefers chokeberry, holly elder, sour-gum, shadberries, wild cherries, wild grapes, green brier and smilax to cherries. He is such a gentleman robber that a bird-bath has been known to lure him away from his favorite mulberry. The robin likes to be a near neighbor to man and that he is a more obliging and honest one than is generally believed is shown by his propensity to rid a farmer's cabbage patch of cut worms, all in exchange for a few (perhaps wormy) cherries.

FEW BENEFITS OF THINNING

Importance of Thinning as Means of Producing the Maximum Number of First Class Apples.

An experiment made recently by the Utah station calls attention to the importance of thinning of first-class apples. Eight-year-old Ben Davis trees, with the fruit thinned to a maximum distance of four inches apart gave a net increase per tree of $1.15 as compared with unthinned fruit. The Jonathans showed a net incease of 30 cents per tree. The same Jonathan trees thinned in the same manner in 1912 gave a net increase of 71 cents per tree over unthinned trees. In practice the cost of thinning appears to be offset by the reduced cost in sorting when the fruit is packed.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Fruit and poultry raising go well together.

Every owner of a colt should look well to the care of the feet.

Selling the choicest of the wheat is a poor way to select seed grain.

Bees wintered out of doors should be where the sun will shine on the hive.

Bad shoeing causes many horses to travel badly, but shoeing is not wholly to blame.

Late chickens sometimes do very well, but they require more care than early ones.

The poultry that is having the run of the orchard now is serving well their day and generation.

* * *

The foal that is being weaned should be watered twice each day. Horses of all ages must be watered frequently and regularly if they are to do well.

Before the snow falls, it is a good plan to go through the orchard, and with a coarse rake, gather up all diseased or rotten apples or other fruit left on the ground, and destroy them.

* * *

In planting fruit trees for family use, select the varieties that appeal to the palate of the home folks, but for the markets select those varieties that keep best, and are in greatest demand.

FILLER FOR CONCRETE-WORK

Rough Stones of Almost Any Character, Found in Almost Any Section of Country Are Favored.

(By H. H. SHEPARD.)

In any section of the country where rough stones of almost any character can be secured and hauled as cheaply as sand and gravel, it will pay to use them as fillers for concrete-work.

A neighbor of ours has built a barn foundation by using rough stones as fillers, with the result of saving fully one-half the cost of construction.

On our own farm rough flint stones all the way from the size of a walnut up to as large as a peck measure are to be had with only the trouble of picking them up.

These rough stones we are using in all of our concrete construction, except for surfacing. The space they take up saves sand, gravel and cement, with a resulting wall or floor as solid and firm as one of all finer material.

Using rough stones as filler in solid concrete construction is similar to laying brick or stone in mortar. The only difference is that forms are used, and that the stones are all hidden when the work is finished. Sand and cement are all that is needed, although gravel, too, may be used in the wet mixture.

Make the forms as usual for any kind of concrete-work, and shovel in the wet mixture of sand, gravel and cement. On this soft mixture place a layer of the rough stones of all sizes and shapes.

They must be clean of soil, so that the cement mixture will stick to them. Cover the layer of stones with more of the wet cement mixture, and "spade" the sides to make smooth surfaces and to settle the mixture among the rocks.

Use a rather slushy concrete, so that it will more easily run among the rocks for filling vacant spaces and for firm binding. Continue the process layer after layer till the wall is finished.

GRADING AND SORTING EGGS

Every Year There Is a Loss of Millions of Dollars in Product Because of Haphazard Methods.

(By M. HASTINGS.)

Eggs are among the most difficult of food products to grade. This is because each egg must be considered separately, and because the actual substance of an egg cannot be examined without destroying the egg.

From external appearance, eggs can be selected for size, color, cleanliness of shell and freedom from cracks. This is the common method of grading in early spring when the eggs are uniformly of good quality. Later in the season the egg candle is used. While any kind of a light may be used, a 16-candlepower electric lamp is the most desirable. The light is inclosed in a box or tin cylinder, in which are made openings about the size of a half dollar. The room being darkened, the candler holds the egg to the light, large end upward, and gives it a quick turn in order to view all sides and to cause the contents to whirl within the shell. To an expert this process reveals the actual condition of the egg to an extent that the novice can hardly realize.

HOW TO GROW HORSERADISH

Crop Is Cut in Fall, Small Roots Removed and Arranged Into Sets Four to Six Inches Long.

Horseradish is commonly grown from sets, and not from seed. Some claim they have best success growing it as a second crop after the early cabbage, beets, etc. The crop is dug in the fall, the small roots removed and cut into sets four to six inches long.

The top end is cut square and the bottom slanting, so as to make no mistake in planting. These are tied in bundles and kept over winter in sand.

In the spring, after the cabbages are set out, a row of horseradish is set in between the cabbage rows. Small holes are made with a light crowbar or long stick and the sets dropped in and covered two or three inches deep, so that they do not come up until July first.

Any deep, rich soil, well drained, will answer for horseradish.

Selecting Breeding Stock.

In selecting breeding stock, the records of the ancestry are always important but the records of the ancestry nearest the individual that you are buying are naturally the most important.

NEW YORK 300 YEARS AGO

From Forest Land It Has Grown to a City of Six Million Inhabitants.

As years come and go in the twirling of this world about the sun, it was but as yesterday when Adrian Block's rude log huts were the first habitations of white men on Manhattan island, says the New York Mail. A branze plate on the building at 45 Broadway is the token of that occupation.

A city of nearly six million people, with real estate values footing up to nearly $10,000,000,000, has been wrought in the three intervening centuries.

Yet as we look back in the days of this tercentenary we are stirred not only by the records of growth, but by the present opportunities and responsibilities incident to the twentieth century status of the city that was born in he seventeenth.

The winter refuge of the crew of the Tiger has become the world center. Captain Block hewed timbers from the virgin forest and built a new ship, which he called the Restless. The swath that he cut was the beginning of Broadway. The name that he gave his schooner was characterized the city.

The restless energy of New York is the greatest factor in the world progress that is focused here in this young giant among the world's metropolises.

War and Life Insurance.

"I inquired of a man high up in the affairs of a big life insurance company whether the killing of so many soldiers will bring heavy losses upon American life insurance companies. 'Far smaller than you might think,' was his answer. 'It is true one New York company has $400,000,000 of insurance in the countries which are at war, but the number of soldiers killed will be but a small proportion of all the people who carry insurance.'"

DOCTOR KNEW Had Tried It Himself.

The doctor who has tried Postum knows that it is an easy, certain, and pleasant way out of the coffee habit and all of the ails following and he prescribes it for his patients as did a physician of Prospertown, N. J.

One of his patients says:

"During the summer just past I suffered terribly with a heavy feeling at the pit of my stomach and dizzy feelings in my head and then a blindness would come over my eyes so I would have to sit down. I would get so nervous I could hardly control my feelings.

"Finally I spoke to our family physician about it and he asked if I drank much coffee and mother told him that I did. He told me to immediately stop drinking coffee and drink Postum in its place, as he and his family had used Postum and found it a powerful rebuilder and delicious food-drink.

"I hesitated for a time, disliking the idea of having to give up my coffee, but finally I got a package and found it to be all the doctor said.

"Since drinking Postum in place of coffee my dizziness, blindness and nervousness are all gone, my bowels are regular and I am well and strong. That is a short statement of what Postum has done for me."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

LUTHER DAY SERVICE.

pared to retract these books and their contents or do you persist in the opinions advanced in them?" All eyes now are fixed on the Reformer. He acknowledges that he wrote the books named. In regard to the second question of retraction he asks that time be granted to him. The Emperor consents upon condition that he would reply by word of mouth and not in writing. This request for a time gives hope to the enemy. They think that he will finally yield. This is an awful moment. Religious freedom with the fetters of churchly abuse stands and appeals for help. The rights of the human conscience like a maiden chained to the post looks with fixed eyes upon the miner's son. Civil liberty like the Prometheus bound to the rock with the vultures of inhuman despotism preying upon its heart calls for aid. The common people who wish to worship their God in spirit and in truth hold up their hands in supplication. Divine hope has thrilled the hearts of all these when they look into the face of the innocent monk. They think that he has been raised up to deliver Israel. But he pauses at this critical moment. He has asked for time. What does all this mean? They hold their breath in dismay. If he fails, all is lost. The excitement has reached its highest tension. The suspense is more than painful. The morrow will decide the fate of Christian civilization. All voices are hushed. All hearts are stilled. They await the issue.

Luther's request is not prompted by cowardice. He has no intention of retracting. On the next morning his heart is stirred to the very depths. The bravest deed is about to be done. He prays most earnestly unto his God. He goes to the Holy Scripture which lays open on his table. He places his left hand on the sacred volume and raising his right hand toward heaven he swears to remain faithful to the Gospel and freely to confess his faith, even should he seal his testimony with his blood. The storm which will shake the world is about to break forth. On the morrow, April 18, at four o'clock in the afternoon, he stands again before the diet. He cares not for the threats of men. He is asked: "Will you defend your books as a whole or are you ready to disavow some of them?" He defends strongly the doctrines which his books contain. The Chancellor, indignantly, replies: "You have not answered the question put to you. Will you or will you not retract?" The fulness of time has come. The hero of the hour is here. There is no tremor in his voice now. He answers at once: "Unless, therefore, I am convinced by the testimony of Scripture or by the clearest reasoning, unless I am persuaded by means of the passages I have quoted, and unless they thus render my conscience bound by the Word of God, I cannot and will not retract, for it is unsafe for a Christian to speak against his conscience." That assembly may have held its breath. The miner's son defies the pomp and power of the world. Looking around upon his distinguished audience he closes with the immortal words: "Here I stand; I cannot do other. God help me. Amen." Then Christian liberty like the dove in the ark flies out with the olive branch of Gospel freedom. Christian civilization is rescued.

Aaronsburg.

The sale by the Crouse heirs was well attended Saturday afternoon.

Dr. D. K. Musser and J. W. Foster were among their home people on Sunday.

A number of people attended the funeral of Guerney Fiedler at Woodward.

Mrs. Leo Hain from Sunbury was a Sunday guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Crouse.

The protracted meeting closed on Saturday night by fifteen conversions Very good attendance every night.

Felix Stiner of Akron, Ohio, is the guest of his friend, Linn Hafley, and is out every day with the Stover hunting party.

Carl Bohn of Tusseyville is being entertained for a few days at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs James Wert.

B. V. Vonada took Mr. and Mrs. L E. Stover, Dan Stetler and Mrs Geesey to State College on Friday to enjoy the big day.

Thomas Hull, who was employed at State College all summer as a carpenter met with an accident a few days ago which made it necessary for him to return home.

Mrs. Elizabeth Weaver is again in her usual good health. Mrs. Polly George is some better at this writing. John Heins, Jr., is also improving from his trouble with his throat.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Barner, formerly of this town, and their children, Frank, Bruce and Helen, of Flemington came in their Overland to spend a few hours with Mrs. Barner's father.

Saturday the Stover hunting party came home with a three-prong buck. The lucky shot was Ray Stover. A few days ago the same party came home with a fine deer shot by Frank Keister.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

Cattle So Afflicted Liable to Transfer Disease to Humans Through Milk, Says Health Commissioner.

The prevalence of the foot and mouth disease as reported among cattle in various sections of Pennsylvania may effect the dairy herds. Should these become infected there is a danger of the transference of the disease from infected animals to human beings through the milk.

As the records in this State show this possibility Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, Commissioner of Health, has issued the following warning:

"The foot and mouth disease which is known to the medical world as aphthous fever is highly infectious in cattle and manifests itself by a rising temperature and the appearance of blisters on the mucus membrane of the mouth, tongue and nose. The blisters are followed by ulcers; digestive disturbances are also common. Death seldom occurs in human beings.

"As a matter of protection against the possibility of infection the use of raw milk may be discontinued. A safety factor is to pasteurize the milk. Following is a simple method which may be used.

"Place a saucer in a pail seven or eight inches in diameter and about the same height. Set the milk bottle on this. Remove the paper cap from the milk bottle. Pour in the pail a sufficient quantity of luke warm water to half cover the bottle. Watch the water and as soon as it has boiled twenty minutes, remove the bottle of milk and allow it to cool slowly Never place the milk immediately upon the ice or the bottle may break Seal the bottle with a new cap, a supply of which you can obtain from the milk man, and place the milk bottle where it will remain at a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees temperature. It must be kept cool and clean if it is to remain safe for use.

"If the milk supply is not received bottled secure a bottle of the same size and cork after sterilization."

Complexion of Legislature.

The political complexion of the next House of Representatives will be one hundred and sixty-four Republicans, forty-one Democrats, one Washington and one Socialist. In 1906 there were one hundred and sixty-seven Republicans in the House.

In the Senate there will be forty-six Republicans, eleven Democrats and one Washington member. The Republicans on joint ballot have a majority of one-hundred and forty-seven.

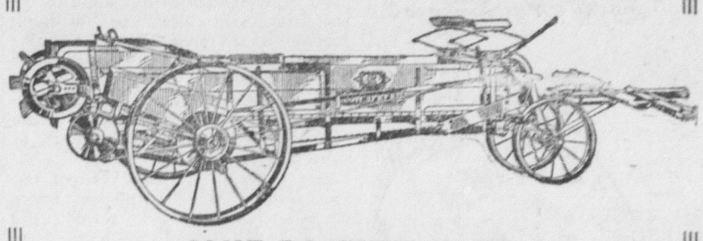
INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER MACHINES



SOME POSITIVE FACTS

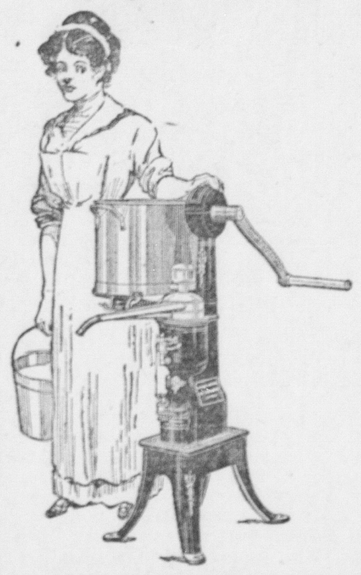
If in need of a manure spreader you cannot buy a better spreader than the LOW SPREAD SPREADER, and in fact, you cannot afford to buy any other. It is noted for its durability and reliability.

It is an all steel spreader, and being low down makes it easy to load. Wide wheels, which give better traction, and fitted with best lugs known. The position of the rear axle carries a sufficient portion of the weight, thus enabling good work, regardless of the condition of the soil.

This spreader can be had with or without the wide spread attachment. When the wide spread attachment is used it will spread a width of eight or nine feet.

Call around at our place of business and let us point out to you many more good features of the LOW SPREAD SPREADER.

Become Acquainted With the BLUEBELL Cream Separator

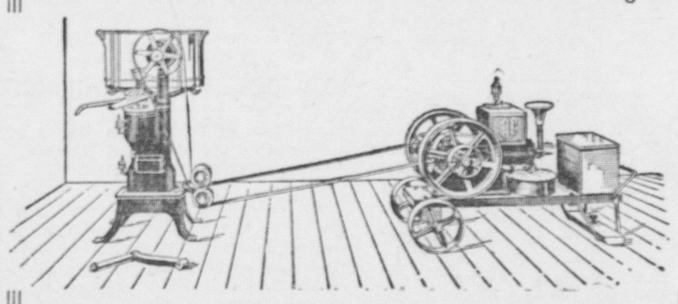


THERE is a good deal more to buying a cream separator than just paying out your money for any machine you happen to take a fancy to. You can find this out after you buy, or you can find it out before you buy. Generally the latter is the cheaper of the two.

For instance, this BLUEBELL cream separator you are practically buying two machines in one—a clarifier and a separator. In some separator bowls, whatever foreign substances are in the milk that the strainer will not remove, collect on the skimming devices and on the sides of the bowl, interfering with the skimming and contaminating all the milk and cream that goes through the separator.

In this machine these foreign substances are collected into the clarifying chamber before separation takes place. Unless you know this separator you can hardly realize the difference that this feature makes in the separation of milk.

Another Point or Two About International Harvester Engine



NOTE the frame of this engine. The base carries all the working parts, yet none of them are part of the base. Base and sub-base are separate castings, a precaution taken to avoid unnecessary expense in case of accident. The cylinder also is a separate casting, because a more even thickness of a cylinder wall can be obtained in this way. The frame design places the strength where it is needed—at the boxes, where the power is applied to the crank shaft. Provision is made for large, long, substantial bearings, adjustable below and above, keeping the crank shaft always in line.

This base is one of the reasons why I H C engines last such a long time. Nothing can get loose or out of line and there is weight enough to absorb the vibration caused by the explosions. This is one of the many features of I H C engines we shall be glad to show you when you come in to see them.
